1. Technical Field The present invention relates to a solid polymer electrolyte fuel cell and a method of manufacturing the same.
2. Background Art Among power sources and clean energy sources currently in use, a fuel cell is attracting attention as an energy supply system capable of providing a highly efficient, compact power source at a reasonable price. Fuel cells convert the chemical energy of fuel (hydrogen, methanol, and the like) to electrical energy through an electrochemical reaction. Accordingly, fuel cells have an advantage in that the system efficiency is not reduced due to the consumption of fuel, such as energy losses. Also, because the use of hydrogen gas as a fuel is unnecessary, fuel cells have an advantage in that there is no concern about hydrogen gas leaks and the risk of explosion. A solid polymer electrolyte fuel cell employs a solid polymer electrolyte membrane to uniformly conduct protons. Fuel cells usually have a laminate structure, in which the solid polymer electrolyte membrane is sandwiched between an anode and a cathode.
