A: Use Ghost 11.5.1.2265 - it is updated for Windows 10 The appellee concedes that where, as here, a decree of a court is correct upon any principle, the judgment may not be interfered with on appeal, and we think that this is so. (In re Wood's Petition (1949), 337 Ill. App. 190, 87 N.E.2d 464.) The decree of divorce here appealed from is correct on the grounds that the respondent has failed to show, by legal evidence, that the maintenance and cure of her children is the sole and exclusive responsibility of appellant, and this he has failed to do. Appellant states that when he was called as a witness he refused to testify because of his marital privilege. The record shows that he was never called as a witness. This argument is not well taken. Appellant contends that the court erred in refusing to allow him to testify *428 that his expenses for his children, which he claims amounted to as much as $800 a month, was exclusive of the income he was receiving from the operation of his business at the time he was residing with his children. He argues that his evidence was uncontradicted, that he was a witness who could not be impeached, and that therefore this denial of his testimony was prejudicial. (Humbert v.
