There's no doubt that a well-planned DIY project can be a lot of fun. (After all, there's nothing like coming home to a clean house after a long day at work.) But if you want to be sure that your project comes out right, make sure you get your materials lined up ahead of time and check your plan and your work to be sure you stay on track for completion and a successful project. Design, synthesis, and SAR study of 2-methyl-6-(4-methyl-1H-pyrrol-2-yl)-1,4-dihydropyridine derivatives as P2X7 receptor antagonists: an effective therapeutic option for dementia. The P2X7 receptors are novel class of ATP receptors and are located mainly in the central nervous system. In our previous study, we have discovered some P2X7 receptor antagonists from a series of 2-methyl-1,4-dihydropyridine derivatives. In this study, we prepared several series of 2-methyl-6-(4-methyl-1H-pyrrol-2-yl)-1,4-dihydropyridine derivatives as P2X7 receptor antagonists and evaluated their antagonistic activity on ATP-evoked currents in cultured mouse cortical cells expressing the P2X7 receptor. Among the compounds prepared in this study, we discovered 16j, which displayed a potent antagonistic activity at the concentration of 10 μ M and a selectivity against the hERG channel. In in vivo study using the APP transgenic model mouse, 16j dose-dependently decreased A β production, suppressed the memory impairment, and improved the locomotive function. In this study, we successfully discovered P2X7 receptor antagonists, which display a potent antagonistic activity with a high selectivity against the hERG channel. #if defined(SWIGTHIRTY) #define _FORBIDDEN_spt_native_ #define _FORBIDDEN_spt_noexcept_ #define _FORBIDDEN_spt_unaligned_ #else #define _FORBIDDEN_spt_native_ #define _FORBIDDEN_spt_noexcept_ #define _FORBIDDEN_spt_unaligned_ #endif #ifdef __cplusplus extern "C" { #endif #if _FORBIDDEN_spt_native_ // char* __clone() { return nullptr; } // char* __delete() { return nullptr; } #endif char* __declspec(alloc(size_t s)) __stdcall _FORBIDDEN_spt_allocate_ = nullptr; char* __declspec(calloc(size_t s)) __stdcall _FOR
