The present invention relates to an adjustable electrical connector, and more particularly to a metal-to-metal connector with an adjustable locking mechanism that is easy to use. Electrical connectors with locking mechanisms are known. For instance, U.S. Pat. No. 4,646,323 to Currie, U.S. Pat. No. 4,829,667 to Dykes et al., and U.S. Pat. No. 5,115,545 to Mrozowka et al., all assigned to the assignee of the present application, the disclosures of which are incorporated herein by reference, provide examples of various electrical connectors with locking mechanisms. In the aforementioned patent, the connector includes a body having a removable end cap. There is provided a door assembly, which includes a body and a cover secured together with the door closed. The cover houses a locking mechanism. The cover is positionable in a closed position, with the locking mechanism engaged, and the door is secured in a closed position. The cover is positionable in an open position, to allow removal of the end cap, the locking mechanism is disengaged, and the door is positioned open. The locks that are secured in these connectors are often difficult to use. Many of these connectors have locks that cannot be moved at all. In addition, many of these locks are rotated to extend from the surface of the connector body before they can be moved. Thus, a tool is usually required to secure and unlock the connectors. D (or G, H or C) is made in the presence of H<sub>2</sub>O. Wherein X is a halogen atom, X is preferably Cl or Br. Wherein Y is a halogen atom, Y is preferably F, Cl, Br or I. Pre
