Q: Save data in a separated file and to retrieve data from that file, using Python I am very new to Python. I have a python script that does some log file manipulations. I have a module that does the file manipulations. The module accepts data and saves that data into a separate file with the help of multiprocessing. After the module saves the data into a file, I would like to save the data in the file also. After that, I would like to retrieve the data from the file (when a request comes for the data) and send the data into the module. Here is my module:

from multiprocessing import * from logging import * import re import csv import subprocess import time class LogHandler(logging.FileHandler): def __init__(self, filename=None, maxBytes=10485760, backupCount=5): logFile = csv.writer(open('error_log.csv', 'w')) logFile.writerow(['Time', 'Process ID', 'Process
Name', 'Exception', 'Data to Process', 'Source File Path', 'Version', 'File Type', 'Line Number', 'Stack Trace',
'Source Machine', 'Thread ID', 'User', 'Remote IP', 'Request ID', 'Request Date', 'Request URL', 'Status', 'Browser', 'Language']) super(LogHandler, self).__init__(filename, maxBytes, backupCount) if __name__ ==
"__main__": # Print subprocess and logger objects: print(" Python's subprocess and logging objects") print("
-----") print(subprocess) print(logging) # Create a logger: logging.basicConfig(level=logging.DEBUG) # Do some logging for debugging purposes: logging.getLogger('root').debug("You made me log the name of python") # Create our file logger: logging.fileLogger("logFile.csv", filename="error_log.csv") # Create
