The CinemaÂ . of God for all time, he is indeed God. Adonai. And if he is not God, who is he? He is ALL of it. The entire universe is perfect. The sun has it's source, the moon is something we call dark matter (not dark matter as in it is usually dark but dark matter as in it comes from dark matter), and the Earth has it's source, banged into existence by an explosion of a star six and a half billion years ago. The universe will one day stop spinning as the energy that brought it to life, having become depleted by matter having come together and transformed from a diffuse form into stars and planets and then eventually into rocks that can bring the universe to a screeching halt. When it stops, the universe will turn back into a dense cloud of particles and a star will explode again, and the chain will begin anew. That's our entire model of the universe. When people say you have to tear it apart and understand the core component of it to get to the truth of it, I ask them to look at their picture and ask yourself this, if every component of the universe is true then is it not true in its entirety? Is it anything less than the truth? And if it is the truth, then is it not not the truth? It will always be, and it will always be with us. We live in a universe, its entire existence is complete. That is how we are to view our world. We are bound to our self by our own refusal to view ourselves as something other than an integral part of the universe. If we choose to love ourselves, to accept the truth of our own existence, and to love others in their existence as something separate from ourselves, we will realize our own divine nature. We will realize our own inner peace, as the universe once
