Sometimes the user_name is something like: Barack Obama Richard Nixon However other times it can be two words: Janice Moore Bob Jones The length of the user name is unknown to me. My question is: Is there an easy way to insert the user name into the database, for example in the following way? Barack Obama A: you can use CHARINDEX to find where your string starts and then substr to get the part you want DECLARE @user_str VARCHAR(100) = 'Barack Obama' SELECT @user_str = SUBSTRING(@user_str, CHARINDEX(' ', @user_str) + 1, LEN(@user_str) -

CHARINDEX(' ', @user_str)) SELECT @user_str This will give you: Barack Obama or this one to just strip out the first word SELECT @user_str = SUBSTRING(@user_str, 1, CHARINDEX(' ', @user_str) - 1) if you want to insert into the database you can use this DECLARE @user_str VARCHAR(100) = 'Barack Obama' INSERT INTO myTable (user_name) VALUES (@user_str) or you could use REPLACE or LTRIM DECLARE @user_str VARCHAR(100) = 'Barack Obama' SELECT @user_str = REPLACE(@user_str, ' ', '') or just use LTRIM or RTRIM SELECT @user_str = LTRIM(RTRIM(@user_str)) your trust, it can transform your business. Contradictory findings in the literature regarding menopausal depression point out the need for further studies to evaluate whether or not menopausal symptoms can be used as risk factors for developing major depression. The relationship between menopause, depression and the presence of a risk factor like the presence of anxiety or other associated conditions is discussed. A community based cohort of 1,316 postmenopausal women was assessed at 3, 6, and 12 months after the menopause. State and trait anxiety were assessed using the state-trait anxiety inventory and other characteristics. Depression was assessed by using the Spanish version of the depression rating scale. Postmenopausal women showed a decrease in their state and trait anxiety; and improvements in their mood over time, being the most pronounced between the first and second assessment. However, prevalence of depression assessed with the depression rating scale is similar in menopausal and premenopausal women. In addition, the presence of other associated conditions, including anxiety, does not predict menopausal depression. These results are inconsistent with some previous findings; however, these differences may be explained by the different instruments used to assess menopausal depression. The results suggest that anxiety and other associated conditions are better predictors of menopausal depression than the menopausal state. A better understanding of the relationship between menopausal state and menopausal depression may have implications for psychological and pharmacological intervention in order to prevent depression. I am amazed that in this day and age, some people still get nervous around public speaking, even for something as simple as a public reading of your work. Like many of my peers, I am an English graduate student, and I have been working on writing a number of short stories that have been published. I recently had the opportunity to do a reading of these stories at the AWP conference in San Francisco. I was nervous, but I think I did well. But I am also worried. Given that these stories have been so successful, and that I am a writer, I have been having a hard time finding similar experiences in which I can compare myself
