I don't know if I added anything like css and I need your help. I want the texbox to be different colors and to be italicized like this: The font of this word is not Gothic, that's why I need it to be italicized. Is there a simple way to do this? A: Try this, {yourtext} This will solve your problem. Q: CSS translate not working on an image inside an I want to create an -tag with a white background and a black tiled-pattern. I am trying to do this with HTML, CSS and JS. Basically I have written this bit: "How far you go in life depends on your being tender with the initial attitudes you have toward the people you deal with. An informal approach, a constructive attitude, patience in dealing with people, tolerance for their limitations, and respect for their point of view will increase the extent and quality of your personal relationships and build trust and goodwill." - Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. I need to align the black pattern with the position of the image, and everything that comes to mind is to use translate(). I did not make this text fit the whole because I wanted to make sure that the white part also fits. Then I tried to do this in JS: const block = document.querySelector(".block"); let pattern = Array(8).fill(0); for (let i = 0; i
