Subtitles for download - Free Download Imatinib treatment to prevent atherosclerosis in mice with mutated fibroblast growth factor receptor-1. Our previous study demonstrated that mice fed a high cholesterol diet (HC) may experience increased heart fibrosis and atherosclerosis, but its mechanism is unknown. To investigate whether the increase in the proliferation of vascular smooth muscle cells (VSMCs) is involved in the development of atherosclerosis, we employed a combination of genetic and pharmacologic methods to examine whether imatinib, an inhibitor of fibroblast growth factor receptor-1 (FGFR-1) signaling, could prevent atherosclerosis. We first generated transgenic

ApoE^{-/-}/fibrillin-1^{-/-} (ApoE^{-/-}/fbn-1^{-/-}) mice in which FGF2 signaling was specifically blocked in VSMCs using an N-terminal truncation of the fibrillin-1 gene (Tie2-Cre-fbn-1DeltaCter). After 9 months of HC feeding, Tie2-Cre-fbn-1DeltaCter mice were crossed with ApoE^{-/-} mice to generate Tie2-Cre-fbn-1DeltaCter/ApoE^{-/-} mice that showed a marked increase in fibrillin-1 in VSMCs due to the reduction of FGF2 signaling. Imatinib treatment for 9 months led to a significant reduction in the number of atherosclerotic plaques in Tie2-Cre-fbn-1DeltaCter/ApoE^{-/-} mice fed an HC diet. Furthermore, the volume of the atheroma was significantly decreased after imatinib treatment. This study showed that the increased proliferation of VSMCs is involved in the development of atherosclerosis and that imatinib might be used to prevent atherosclerosis.

Donald Trump meets with President Xi Jinping of China, January 6, 2017. (REUTERS/Jonathan Ernst) President Donald Trump met with Chinese President Xi Jinping on Friday to start negotiations on reducing the U.S. trade deficit with China and other economic issues. Bloomberg News reported that Trump is expected to pursue the following issues during his meeting with Xi: Trump administration hopes to reduce the U.S. trade deficit, one of the top foreign policy goals
