Pacing Technol J 2001 May;38(3):345-53..Liver transplantation in alcoholic liver disease. The survival of patients with alcoholic liver disease awaiting liver transplantation is limited. The indications for transplantation are based on those for cirrhosis of other etiology. Alcohol abstinence within 3 months of transplantation is recommended to avoid recurrence of the disease. In the absence of abstinence, more stringent abstinence requirements should be considered. To achieve a long-term survival comparable to that for patients with cirrhosis of other etiology, a limited resection of the disease should be considered before transplantation. With this approach, patients will also benefit from a faster rehabilitation. To maximize outcomes, liver transplantation should be performed early in the course of the disease. Patients should be selected carefully for transplantation, with preference given to younger patients, using established noninvasive methods for assessing liver fibrosis. The use of extended criteria donors, although decreasing short-term survival, may improve outcomes for these patients and warrant further study.Q: How to achieve the highlighted result of the below Google Trend I am trying to achieve the highlighted result of the below google trend.How can i achieve it.
