What's new in Wolf's Fury:

Wolf's Fury is a 1953 adventure film directed by Robert Siodmak, produced and starred by Steven Seagal. Originally released by RKO Radio Pictures in Sweden, the film was later released in the United States by Universal Pictures, who had rights to the film in the United States. Plot American astronaut Scott Alexander arrives at a New Mexico airbase with his partner, Dr. Wayne Webber, who has been taken by Indians as a hostage. Alexander and Webber are taken to a secret military facility. General Marcus Hilton, a high-ranking officer in the American Air Force, welcomes them and explains that Webber's special treatment of an alien life form is a reality hybrid, brought from Europe while he was working there. Webber's patient is a 1950 German original balloon-based compact research rocket called Aries which houses a joint humanoid Aries-Man project. Webber, and Dr. Lee Harbin, head of the Aries project, while preparing to fly Aries, learn that the Russians have launched a rocket with one of the Aries pilots, Alexander. Hilton tells Webber that the Russians will shortly launch a nuclear attack against the United States, and reveals his plan to detonate the Aries rocket outside Earth's atmosphere to intercept the Russian rocket and shoot it down with a nuclear bullet. Dornauer, a traitorous Nazi, infiltrates the base as the leader of "Wolf's Fury" motorcycle gang, and he and his men attempt to kidnap Webber, but he is unable to resist them. Hilton invites Alexander and Webber to have dinner with him and a Russian general in Las Vegas, Nevada where a Soviet consul is staying. At dinner Webber is picked up and tied up by Dornauer and his men, while the others take Alexander. Aries launch is expected in five days. Webber attempts to escape being tied up, and the gangmen kill their only guard but Dornauer sees them. Alexander is forced to reveal his prisoner to Dornauer and he leaves with Webber to find "that robot". Dornauer leads the gang into an ambush. The gang members are ambushed by the airbase guard force and the surviving gang members are killed, including Dornauer. The Aries rocket is successfully launched. Alexander's attempt to contact the Russian ambassador fails. Alexander plans to use the nuclear bullet to shoot down the Aries rocket in the atmosphere, but Hilton plans to shoot it from
