Judge Thomas Wingate ruled that the suspension of state Sen. Ray Jones, a Louisville Republican, would not violate state election law since it only applies to his campaign committee and not his official, individual political party. Jones has been under investigation since 2017 for allegedly failing to disclose the value of real estate that he owned in the state while working for the East Central Kentucky Republican Party. Republican officials said that Jones, who was elected in 2016, raised $47,359 in 2012 and $50,000 in 2014. The party said that Jones' salary was $22,500. "The public should be aware that Sen. Jones is continuing his campaign for Senate," Wingate wrote in his decision. "The decision this court has made is very clear," District Attorney Dave Beshear, who is a Democrat, told reporters after the ruling. "It says that politics is a part of the job you have to do. And if you are going
