Minecraft: Story Mode – Season 2 Xbox One – Standard Edition: The Entire Back Catalogue Pack on the same discQ: SQL Server select nth row My situation is I have this SQL query that returns a list of product name and a count of how many products are sold for that product. What I need to do is get the top selling product for a specific month (i.e. for November it would be product 1, for December it would be product 2 etc). My query: SELECT e.name, COUNT(e.id) as total_products, SUM(case when e.status='sold' then 1 else 0 end) as sold_products FROM {tbl_productlisting} e WHERE e.status = 'available' AND e.date_expire >= '2019-11-01' AND e.date_expire

What's new:

Flight VTAC Fire Carry Case I usually do not comment on product reviews, but I felt it was an excellent review and I wanted to point out one error in there. The article wrote: When I shook the helmet out at dawn, the smoke-caked airbursts and projectiles were still in the helmet. Whoops - that's not correct. It's the airbursts and projectiles I fell from and was able to raise the helmet up, but when I did there was nothing in it. The reason it is incorrect information is that the backpack can easily lift a fully-fueled Stinger using nothing but strong, clip-together, reusable canisters of fuel. This is very well known to Gear Jocks and readers, see: and Stings fire armed in belts - this means they are packed with plastic and/or pyrotechnic devices. If there are no containers in the wreckage, then it is highly likely that the pilots either died on the ground or that the payload did not survive. If there are any containers in the wreckage, then the pilots survive, but the bombs are probably incomplete, and therefore it is unlikely that the charges would fire; though the aircraft may be armed when she crashes. Full stop. Well, the Fire Carrier's batteries are not charged on the ground. They are charged, but not charged enough to fire if the aircraft is dropped without an airframe. In Afghanistan, I couldn't care less if a single rounds fired up into the air. Any safe-rifle-brotha can drop the aircraft from a 50FO. This is why the Black Shale Iraq F16s have weapons that fire at a distance of only a few meters. Click to expand... You just provided more ammo for people on this board to have a horse in a "race"... On a serious note, the guns are unlikely to fire if they are in the aircraft because the aircraft may not be armed and they are small cannisters of shale and possible/very unlikely pyrotechnic explosives are packed on the belly and small charges that are detonated when it hit the ground. If the aircraft lands intact and has a weapon, then it is powered and it is used. If it lands and
