Notable gameplay features implemented with HyperMotion Technology: Graphic depiction of player actions allows for easier comprehension of the match and player animations. Includes the ability to mute game sounds to concentrate on the action on the pitch. New and improved mechanics and visual effects during fouls and free kicks. The ingame camera has been updated to fully-reflect all of these gameplay features and tactics. In addition to playing with and against real-life football players, FIFA 22 will also feature the opportunity to play in the new "Build a Club" mode. Starting with the new class system, FIFA 22 introduces FIFA Ultimate Teams; a mode where players can create their own club and compete with other clubs within the game as well as online. Available on PlayStation 4, Xbox One and PC, FIFA Ultimate Teams is another great way to play with friends and compete with other players for the FIFA Community Championship Series, the grand prize of which is the chance to play in a FIFA World Cup event with the FIFA World Cup trophy. The following topics were also addressed at the FIFA Ultimate Team keynote presentation:ClojureWeb App Webapps are becoming increasingly popular. By using Clojure you can quickly develop and deploy a webapp, in a similar manner as you would develop and deploy an application on JavaEE servers. Having a Clojure webapp, is a breeze thanks to the numerous Clojure web frameworks available. You can find more information on them in this page, but let's say you want to build a small one to expose some REST API that the frontend can consume. In this page we will describe how to create a Clojure webapp that will expose some REST API and consume that API from a ReactJS webapp. The webapp will consist in a single file ClojureScript (you can run it in browsers using ClojureScript repl), that will define the logic of the API. It will include the API design and development/testing model. For any more information on the project you can read the Gist, the README.md or the Open Source at LeWeb. You will need leiningen yeoman ReactJS Clojure For the sake of the tutorial, we will consider that you have already cloned the project and have a lein running to build the project, so you can skip the steps below if you don't have those already. First thing we need to
