What's New In P-Encoder?

P-Encoder is a web application which has been designed to make the process of PHP obfuscation a simpler task. Main features include high level support for multiple target files, the elimination of white spaces, the substitution of special characters, removal of numbers, as well as hash generation and verification. Mobile Apps Testing: We have found that mobile apps testing requires the specialist testing agencies who can carry out the testing services at the required level for mobile apps testing. A: I'm not familiar with P-Encoder. But if you have even a modest familiarity with PHP it's unlikely that you'd need to even attempt to decipher it. The reason this is the case is that PHP has very little to protect against the mass-comparison technique. Even if you can find a single character which exists in one place in the code, you can only inspect the source to find that out. If you get any code executed, or ever write a script yourself, that character is going to be executed in lots of places. There is nothing to prevent you from executing the same or similar code in different places. Maybe it's because I've been into security for so long that I can make sense of this, but the very concepts of code obfuscation are flawed, because they are based on the idea that it makes sense for a hacker to spend an amount of time to decipher the code. You might as well use encryption - it's more difficult and there are legitimate good uses for it. So, I wouldn't bother.
