have made good on their promise to start a pay-for-plastic-bag boycott, moving to near-complete ban in Australia around the world. The only thing keeping this sham of a boycott alive is the collective idiocy of Australia's major grocery chains - Woolworths, Coles and Giant Tiger, but it was the public's response on social media that originally allowed this to succeed. Despite false claims about 'solar nanofibres', and faux-science about paper cup carriers, the majority of comments on social media highlighted that supermarkets themselves were probably the largest part of the problem. Not solar microfibres, not 'paper' but plastic. This was a very helpful tactic for Shilpa Govani, who works for the Council on the Advancement of the Mediterranean Diet and was in South Africa with her husband - someone she'd known in Australia for 10 years. "If you go to a supermarket there's just so much plastic going on," Govani told The World Today. "There's people prancing around with their hands in the checkout and plastic bags just getting stuck to their hands - and it's not their fault they had that plait or that blouse or hair." "An institution has to have it's own procedures and it's probably a bit like the archbishop in the catholic church or the judge in the supreme court - they have to hand over power for a start." Piggybacking on the anti-plastic bag campaign, Govani was pretty quick to understand that the only way to genuinely stop Australians from buying plastic bags was by making them throw away their cash by making it difficult to exchange cash for goods at the checkout. "For the cashiers, you can't make it hard for them - you have to make it easier for them - and what can you do?" Govani said. "It may be a bit of engineering, but it has to come from the store itself. That's the easiest part, the social campaign and making it very clear what the costs are." The alternative for Govani is an awareness campaign similar to the public backlash after Woolworths believed customers would only purchase other products if they were offered a pack of gum with their phone

"19827" is a side-scrolling action game. Simple controls and addictive gameplay. You can customize your character as you like with weapon combinations and clothing combinations. Eat, drink, and sleep; you can even play different music than your opponent. A new opponent will come, so battle and enjoy yourself. "Food mezzos!" Take care of the imps of the dungeon. "Today's music! Rejoice in the light of dawn!" A girl who has been asleep for a hundred years. What? That voice. What? What's going on? Hey, put down that sword! I was dreaming. I was dreaming. There was a guy... He had a sword. If I don't dream anymore, I'll be able to leave this place. Can I leave the place of my dreams? No, I can't even dream about it. No, I can't ever think about it. No, I can't think about him. I've been awake 100 years. 100 years! 100 years... The person who chose the dungeon from the beginning of the game is dead. A guy who had a sword is here in the dungeon. No. I shouldn't be here. There's nobody here. Is it a ghost? I remember falling from this height. I know this floor. There's a dungeon here. I hate dungeons. I'm sorry. Then I chose this dungeon because it was really hard. Then I chose this game to give up my free will. Then I would die, too. A difficult place. Of course it was hard. I can't, I just can't enter this place. I guess I'll stay here until I die. I'm not sure I want to die here. The mystery of this dungeon. Who are you? Tell me your name. Name?! Tell me your name. Tell me your name. Hey! Hey! Tell me your name. Tell me your name. My name is Pain. My name is Pain. That's it? "The names have been recorded. It's all over now." "Approved. Character creation is complete." My name is Pain. I know where you are now. I think I can find the exit
