Steps Loading... 1. Open Photoshop on your computer. Click through the tutorials that you find helpful in the tutorials tab, which can be found in the Help menu. 2. Once you've learned how to use Photoshop's interface by playing around with different tools, click "File" and then "Save As." Choose the location you'd like to save your image to and then type in a name for the file. 3. Once you have saved your file, click the image in the layer panel and then click the "Layer" menu in the top-left corner of the screen. Click the "Add Layer Mask" option. 4. In the layers palette, click "Layer Mask," and you'll see the layer mask of your image pop up. This is the mask that you'll be using to make edits to the layer as you create your edits. 5. Click the "Foreground Color" icon and choose a color for the layer mask. Hold down the shift key and drag over the image to fill the mask. 6. Use the layer mask to fill in unwanted areas of the image, or to change the color of the image. There's no need to worry about these colors bleeding through onto the layers beneath. To do so, simply paint over the blurred area with a brush or paint bucket. 7. There is also a menu option in the layers palette called "Layer Mask Options" where you can change the opacity of the layer mask at any time. The default transparency setting is 50% and may be changed to a setting that better suits your individual needs. 8. Once you are satisfied with the changes you've made, click the "Layer" menu in the top-left corner of the screen and click "Delete Layer." 9. If there is more than one layer in your document, you can press the "Delete" key or click the "Delete" icon in the layers palette and select the layers you wish to delete. 10. Finally, save the file by clicking "File" and then "Save." This will bring up the "Save" dialog. In the dialog box, choose the location and name of your image. 11. Click "Save." This proposal is to establish a training program in Environmental Toxicology at the University of Cincinnati. Its central focus is to educate pre- and postdoctoral fellows (from a wide range of research backgrounds) in the role of environmental toxicology in basic and applied problems. Students are trained in four areas: Cell and Molecular Toxicology, Animal Models, Biochemical Toxicology and Exposure Assessment, and Epidemiology. Each area has close interaction with the others and provides training and learning experience which covers a range of fundamental and applied research areas. The long-term goal of this program is to train scientists in the areas of toxicology and related sciences to assume leadership positions that can address the problems of human and environmental health of importance to our society. Developmental and TGF-beta 1-induced changes in the proliferation of human neuroblastoma cell lines. Cell proliferation and the expression of TGF-beta 1 and the TGF-beta receptor were investigated during a time course of human neuroblastoma (NB) cell differentiation induced by retinoic acid (RA). The NB cell lines atypical (LAN-1) and non-atypical (SK-N-DZ) showed a reduced proliferation rate and expressed the TGF-beta receptor with different efficiency. TGF-beta 1 induced a dose dependent decrease of the proliferation rate of LAN-1 cells, and the expression of TGF-beta 1 and the TGF-beta receptor were unaltered by RA in LAN-1 cells, while SK-N-DZ cells showed an increase of the expression of TGF-beta1 and the TGF-beta receptor without changes in the proliferation rate. RA decreased the expression of the TGF-beta receptor on LAN-1 cells and induced a rapid down-regulation of TGF-beta1 on SK-N-DZ cells. The protein level of c-fos was increased after 12 h of RA treatment on LAN-1 cells, while it was not altered in SK-N-DZ cells. RA induced an increase of endogenous TGF-beta1 and the expression of the TGF-beta receptor on LAN-1 cells and a decrease of the expression on SK-N-DZ cells, which was accompanied by a reduced proliferation rate. On LAN-1 cells, the TGF-beta mediated c-fos activation was inhibited by exogenous TGF-beta. In SK-N-DZ cells, exogenous TGF-beta enhanced the c-fos activation
