A division bench comprising Justice SK Mehta and Justice Ruchir Garg has struck down a law prohibiting bhang and alcohol. The apex court said that the law, which dates back to 1875, was unconstitutional. Reacting to the verdict, the state government reacted with a sense of relief. The ruling was based on a petition filed by Rauf Khan, who heads the Rajasthan-based NGO Makers of Chillumani Mhanjan, which supports hemp farmers and distributes and promotes hemp products.

The petition said the law was made way back in 1875 and the government has failed to suggest any law to regulate its production and consumption. “In the recent times, fresh interest has emerged for the cultivation of hemp and cultivation has become rampant in India. However, the present age old law is not allowing cultivation of industrial hemp,” it said. The petition claimed that bhang is not a narcotic and does not cause any harmful side effects. It argued that this law is not only outdated but also against the fundamental rights guaranteed under the Constitution of India. “Despite the fact that hemp is a legal crop in various states of the country, there is no law in India recognising its cultivation. It is the sole responsibility of the State to safeguard the rights of farmers who cultivate hemp for their livelihood,” it said. Hemp is used for a variety of purposes. To make clothes and ropes, people grow and produce it. To make nutritious food like paneer and yoghurt, people can use it. Advertising To ban its consumption, the high court had termed it as ‘substitute to alcohol, and therefore, akin to harmful liquor’. “It is in the opinion of this honourable court that the present law, which is on the statute book since 1875 and which seeks to ban the consumption of bhang, is archaic and unconstitutional,” the
