After reaching a high of $19,150 in December, it has now dropped to around $15,500. Many factors have played a role in the fall. Most notably, China's decision to ban the trading of cryptocurrencies on domestic exchanges has had a considerable influence. As of this writing, Bitcoin has once again joined Ethereum and Litecoin, which are currently the only other cryptocurrencies that are not suspended in China. Bitcoin's rapid rise in 2018 brought its price above $20,000, but the recent drop in price has seen a steep decline in the number of crypto wallets. After a record-breaking spike in 2017, the number of wallets has dropped since the start of 2018. Data from blockchain.info shows that the total number of crypto wallets has dropped from 2.3 billion to 2.1 billion, which in turn has led to a reduction in the total number of Bitcoin transactions by almost 40 percent. As reported by CCN.com, 90 percent of transactions are now happening off-blockchain, which is a significant departure from the days when even the largest exchanges had to rely on blockchain technology to operate. As for the future of crypto, one analyst has warned that Bitcoin is on the brink of a "very dangerous time." Tone Vays has previously been critical of Bitcoin The prominent analyst has been a c6a93da74d
