

This is why my main goal for this year has been to start learning Japanese. I have learnt Japanese since about the age of 7. However I wasn't always an A1 student and I spent a lot of time studying my heart out. One of the best ways to learn a language is to study with a Japanese speaker. This is also one of the best ways to consolidate your studies so that you can remember everything you've learnt. (I only use the ichict which is read by all Japanese students and a hiragana-katakana book called TOEICs Japanese Language Proficiency Test This should be something you can buy for about $50-100 in Asia). Of course it helps that I was brought up in Japan but if your parents have never been to Japan or you can't afford a ticket to Japan (and I've seen some really interesting things on tours around there) then make it the website digitaljapanese.nara.go.jp that I have used the past 6 years and you can also find others there. It has books that you can read, free online materials that you can read and you can take a free online test of the material that you are studying which really helps to consolidate it and you can all opt for a free or pay subscription as well which makes it even more useful. Also it's a good idea to keep a diary of what you're doing and a diary of your studies which you can photocopy and then mark up as you go. Also here is a link to a Japanese website called worldofjapan.com This is a free online English language learning site run by Japanese business people which if you go to their menu they have lessons, forums, news and teaching links so if it's any use for you.
