Slate printed a mean-spirited article about me, so here's my reply - sasmaroutledge ===== kosei I think a good editor would have caught the missing "or" in the second sentence of the second paragraph. And I think a good editor would have caught the "extra comma" in the last sentence. ----- mrtron Noone cares about some random person's ramblings - just be glad someone stopped by and took the time to reply.

1. Field of the Invention This invention relates to a reaction gas conversion apparatus for converting a reaction gas containing a metal component, a metal compound or the like to a gas useful as a raw material gas for semiconductor manufacturing processes, or to a raw material gas for glass manufacturing processes.

2. Description of the Prior Art In the conventional reaction gas conversion apparatus, oxygen is fed into a reaction furnace along with a raw material gas to be converted, where a reaction takes place by a heat source such as combustion of the raw material gas. A product gas, containing a metal component, a metal compound or the like is taken out from the reaction furnace. In such a conversion apparatus, a raw material gas for semiconductor manufacturing processes, or a raw material gas for glass manufacturing processes which is required to have a specific component content or has a certain kind of the component, or a raw material gas containing an impurity component such as NH_3 which is taken out of the apparatus, must be delivered in a constant gas flow to a film forming apparatus, a chemical vapor deposition (CVD) apparatus or the like. In order to assure a constant raw material gas flow, it is necessary to always maintain a constant air flow rate to the reaction furnace. The air flow rate, however, varies with environmental factors, such as temperature, humidity, wind velocity, etc., and with factors associated with the conversion apparatus. The air flow rate, for example, increases as the temperature rises. If a raw material gas flow rate is kept at a constant value, therefore, a proportion of the raw material gas to be fed into the reaction furnace is reduced as the air flow rate increases, so that the reaction time tends

Interna Tajno (Slovene: Študentski izlet) is a Slovenian secret service agency created in 2007 as successor to the Križarska policija (Križka's police) and Viške službe (Viška služba) (Viška is the old name of the Križarska policija). The agency is responsible for the Directorate of Informations of the Slovenian Security Forces, which is the overall directorate of the agency. The agency represents the nature of the Security Forces, which is a state agency, and have certain tasks within the enforcement process of the Internal Security Act and the Foreign Intelligence Act. It investigates organized crime, terrorism, espionage, and other cases in the interest of the Republic of Slovenia.
History The agency was created under the act of the Interior Minister, which was signed on 27 April 2007, based on article

31 of the act of the Security Forces, which was adopted in 2002. The agency changed its name in the act of the Minister of Interior and the Police, which was signed on 29 August 2007, and the regulation that was adopted on 11 September 2007. The act of the Interior and Police Minister was adopted on 29 September 2007, and the act of the Interior Minister was finalized on 28 March 2008. The police of the agency fall within the jurisdiction of the Ministry of Interior and Police. The agency was established with the establishment of the Ministry of Interior and Police, which took effect on 1 May 2007. Structure The agency was established by the act of the Minister of Interior and Police, which was signed on 27 April 2007. The act of the Interior Minister creates the agency, in which the security officers of the army, navy, and the Slovenian Police are protected. The act of the Interior Minister creates a Director of Internal Intelligence, who is appointed by the Minister of Interior and Police, and he represents the director of the agency as an independent entity. He is not subordinate to anyone, according to the act. The act of the Interior Minister establishes the Directorate of the Directorate of Informations of the Security Forces, which is the direct directorate of the agency. Functions The agency has the tasks to detect and prevent espionage
