Adobe Photoshop review is in the beta stage, final release in november 2016. They made available patch for the about 2 months after we downloaded it.

In the long run, I don't think it's a good idea to do this kind of review if they don't release new version after it goes public. And again, all this is in beta stage at the moment. Thus the review wasn't perfect, although they improved some stuff.

But I have less and less reasons to keep using this program and as of now, most of my work is done in Illustrator or InDesign. I will only buy this version if they release new version or if its an updated version for touch.

I really admire the atmosphere of game where you play and learn, but redesigning a software that must handle heavy tasks like this is not what game is about. It should be a pleasure to use a product. Also, I would have liked a more direct feedback on what would be the best improvements this guys want them to develop.

Finally, I wonder how are they going to manage all the new features that I don't know and use myself. I have to ask a lot of things on a daily basis.

While they would have to make a lot of new features to develop it, I can only ask why has to do everything by them by themselves. Aht one of the first steps they should give to this program is to not let user to customize anything. Once the program is downloaded, you have to do what the program is saying.

Was it really so hard to do what Apple does on the os level? :)

functions and tools that Photoshop has. Adobe Photoshop therefore still remains one of the best options to edit photos in the market.
