- Can safely and securely wipe disk-partitions and hard disks
- Can wipe external drives
- No data loss or data recovery

How to erase files permanently using Data Wipe? We know that there is always a risk when you erase files manually. However, even the advanced users often forget to delete a single file when they are in the need of erasing. Therefore, we would like to assure you that Data Wipe is not a powerful and risky tool as others. Instead, it will simply make your job so much easier. In a matter of seconds, the application will securely wipe the files, folders and drives of your computer or any storage media, leaving no traces of the files that were erased. The user-friendly interface will guide you through the whole process and at any step you can stop it. How can I know whether the files, folders or partitions are securely deleted? When you select a drive, a list of all its content will be displayed. The following list will explain how can you identify which of the listed files are deleted using Data Wipe:

- All files except the System Volume Information (SVI) are securely deleted
- SVI is the system partition and the contents of this file cannot be deleted
- Files and directories created in the last two minutes are also securely deleted
- Files that were opened in the last two minutes and the application was not closed are not permanently deleted.

$$(a + d)\frac{\partial N_i}{\partial t} = N_i(b-d) - bN_i^2.$$
 Here a, b, d are non-zero constants and N_i is the population of a species i . For my case, $i=1$, but I want to solve this for any two species and solve the equation. Is it possible to use any known solution to this type of DE and obtain the same solution? What I have done till now:
$$\frac{\partial N_1}{\partial t} = \frac{bN_1^2}{(a+d)N_1 + bN_1^2} - \frac{a+d}{N_1 + bN_1^2}.$$
