Q: React Native: Possible to start a script on a Button press? Is it possible to start a script at a certain button press in React Native, lets say start the "timer" in the code? A: Yes, you can do that with a JS Promise which handles any subsequent successful / failed commands: In your onPress event handler: `function startTimer() { // Set your timer to some arbitrary value (say 1000 ms) setTimeout(() => { // If the timer is supposed to end, return a false return false; }, 1000); }`

Then in your render function, add a promise: Then in your startTimer function, wait for the promise to resolve and do whatever you want: `function startTimer() { return new Promise((resolve, reject) => { setTimeout(() => { if (this.state.isTimerRunning) return reject('Already running'); this.setState({isTimerRunning: true, timerValue: this.state.timerValue + 1000}); resolve(); }, 1000); }); }`

If the timer is supposed to end before the 1000ms elapses, then reject the promise. I created a small StackBlitz example to show this.

Q: How can I append the route to a controller to root directory in Laravel 5.4 Laravel 5.4 `Route::post('category', 'CategoryController@action')->name('category.create');` And in Controller public function `action() { dd('Hi'); }`

I'm having a problem, how can I get rid of `/category/create` to `/create`? I just want to append the name to the route A: you can create a middleware
